

Copyright ^[1]

Copyright in this website is owned by the Australian Learning Lecture (ALL).

Material published on this site (information, text, images, sounds and audio-visual material) is protected by intellectual property law: this includes copyright and, where applicable, moral and cultural rights.

You may download, display, print or reproduce this content in unaltered form for educational purposes, non-commercial research or study. Any use or referral of content from this website must include full and proper acknowledgement. For any other use or more information please contact us ^[2].

Unauthorised commercial publication or reproduction of any part of this website is specifically prohibited.

The Australian learning Lecture does not own the copyright in all the material on this website. In some cases copyright belongs to third parties and has been published on this website under a licence agreement: this does not authorise you to copy that material.

If you wish to adapt, publish, distribute or commercialise any material presented on this website you must get written permission from ALL. You may also be required to get additional copyright clearances from the rights holder.

Source URL: <https://www.all-learning.org.au/copyright>

Links

[1] <https://www.all-learning.org.au/copyright>

[2] <https://www.all-learning.org.au/contact-us>